

Levels of difficulty of the snowshoe trails and demands on users

Snowshoe trails are marked but basically not prepared. Use of the trails marked by operators is entirely at the users' own risk. Trails involving a risk of avalanche are barricaded at their starting points.

Blue - easy

Suitable for beginners / newcomers. Easy terrain with secured promotion and relegation, no difficulties, such as crossings or steep passages, potentially dangerous sections through appropriate measures. No special previous experience necessary.

Red - moderate

Suitable for snowshoers with some experience, moderately steep terrain with occasional steeper or exposed sections in the promotion and relegation, or crossings that require a customized viedo. Security measures are limited to very steep or exposed areas. Sure step and a head for heights is required.

Black - difficult

Suitable for experienced snowshoers. Some steep and exposed terrain, which requires a good snowshoe walking technique. Fuses are limited to particularly vulnerable areas with danger of falling. Slip resistance, fear of heights and a good physical condition are required.
